
Leading Youth to Spiritual Maturity and a Strong Biblical Faith

Look at each of your students in light of the questions below. I recommend that answers come from pastors, parents, coaches, and small group leaders. The more input you can get, the better picture you will have. Ask these questions at the beginning of each year and the end. Talk with your students about their progress and changes in their answers. It's a big investment, but one worth making.

Have your students fill out the student version (download here) and compare answers.

For explanation on each of the questions, refer back to my original blog post.

1. What do they love the most?

2. What are they focused on?

3. Are they willing to take risks?

4. How do they define sin?

5. Are they missional?

6. Do they really get the idea of love?

7. Who do they trust and rely on the most?

8. What are their reasons for believing? Or withholding belief?

9. How thorough is their knowledge of the Bible?

10. Are they pursuing a vocation they were created for?
